

Abstract of the Disclosure

A dual point user input is recognized on a touch based user input device that is only capable of outputting a single input position signal by forming or detecting a first position signal, preferably storing the position signal, forming or detecting a subsequent second position signal and 5 determining if the second position has its source in a simultaneous dual point user input.